Details:

The McConnell Group, www.themccgroup.com, is a corporation offering services and products to government, industry and academia. The McConnell Group has offices in Rockville, MD; San Antonio, TX; and Dublin, PA. The company has over 230 employees serving pharmaceutical, biotechnology, and government agencies.

Our Life Sciences Division is seeking a veterinarian to support our programs in biomedical research services, technical services, military working dog kennel management, working dog breeding program, aquatic toxicology, as well as agro-terrorism and toxicology services.

The Intern has overall responsibility for basic veterinary care to our corporate clients, and plays a major role in the animal health programs. This unique program provides significant introduction, training and career growth opportunities for a veterinarian interested in a career in biomedical research, bioterrorism, and/or the business of veterinary medicine. The intern may assist in the design and implementation of in-vivo models to investigate the toxicology and pathology of important human diseases.

The successful applicant will assist the research and animal husbandry staff in the diagnosis and treatment of medical cases. The intern will be exposed to laboratory animal medicine in a pharmaceutical research environment by rotation through the laboratory animal medicine department of a major pharmaceutical company. The intern will be allowed to attend local laboratory animal medicine training programs. The intern will be expected to pursue one or more clinical or research interests and to prepare the results for presentation at an appropriate professional meeting as well as for publication in the peer reviewed literature.
